BART Escalator Project Replaces Platform Escalators inside Embarcadero Station in Coming Months

BART will soon begin a months-long project to replace the platform escalator near the Beale and Pine Street entrances at Embarcadero Station. There will be no “down” escalator from the concourse to the platform at that end of the station (please see the map below - the escalator is shown in orange). Two sets of stairs will remain open at that end of the station. In addition, a down escalator to the platform will be available at the opposite end of the station.

A newly-rebuilt escalator near the Main Street entrances is nearing completion and is expected to reopen in the next few days (it is also shown as orange in this map).

The work is all part of the Market Street Escalators Renovation Project, which has already completed 18 newly rebuilt escalators at the four downtown San Francisco stations.
